A View from the Summit

In Memorium...

Kay-C Phipps - Manager - Snellville

Common Sense lived by simple, sound financial policies (don't spend more than you earn) and reliable parenting strategies (adults, not kids, are in charge).

His health began to rapidly deteriorate when well intentioned but overbearing regulations were set in place.

Reports of a six-year-old boy charged with sexual harassment for kissing a classmate, teens suspended from school for using mouthwash after lunch, and a teacher fired for reprimanding an unruly student only worsened his condition!

It declined even further when schools were required to get parental consent to administer aspirin to a student but could not inform the parents when a student became pregnant and wanted to have an abortion.

Finally, Common sense lost the will to live as the Ten Commandments became contraband, churches became businesses and criminals received better treatment than their victims. Common Sense finally gave up the ghost after a woman failed to realize that a steaming cup of coffee was hot ,

Beer Recipe: Seven Onion Soup

1/4 cup butter
2 Spanish onions, chopped
1 red onion, chopped
1 Vidalia onion, chopped
1 leek, chopped
4 shallots, chopped
4 green onions, chopped
12 chives, chopped
1 Tbsp minced garlic
4 cups dunkel, any dark lager
4 cups chicken stock
2 cups beef stock
1 Tbsp sugar
Pinch of salt
Pinch of black pepper
1/2 tsp thyme
Garnish: croutons with provolone cheese melted on top

*Melt the butter in a 1-gallon pot. Add the first 6 onions listed. Sweat the six onions for approximately 5 mins on low heat, until slightly browned.

*Add the dunkel and cook until the liquid is reduced by half.

*Add the chives, garlic, chicken stock, beef stock, sugar, salt, pepper, and thyme. Bring to a simmer for approx 5 mins or until the onions are soft.

Engineers: flip-friendly beer mat for drinkers

They say the Aeromat gives anyone playing the pub game Smash and Grab - flipping the mat up from the edge of a table and catching it mid air - an added advantage.

Ian Johnston, an aerodynamic expert at the Open University, and Hazel Lucas, who is doing a masters in engineering at Oxford University, spent two months working on the project.

They constructed a special machine designed to simulate the action of a person flipping a mat from below. Mr Johnston said: "The first part of the research, which was particularly enjoyable, involved going to a canalside pub and experimenting with the different beer mats."

Further tests found the key to the perfect flip was to have as much of the mat over the table's edge as possible to be able to strike it near the centre. Mr Johnston and Ms Lucas experimented with 35 designs before settling on one they considered the best. The final design looks much like any square drip mat but uses an arched-shape piece of cardboard, two-thirds of its length. The last third is made from foam, lighter than the cardboard, allowing more than half the mat to balance over the table's edge.

It also has a plastic V-shaped wing on either side designed to keep it level in flight and close to the flipper, making it easier to catch.

"When I first looked at the project I thought it was a bit of a joke but it soon became fascinating from an engineering point of view," said Mr Johnston, who is based at the Open University in Edinburgh. "With the demise of Concorde, our mat is perhaps the most aerodynamically advanced object now in the air."

David Hodge, marketing manager at Strongbow which commissioned the research, said: "This is a breakthrough for the legion of pub sportsmen who have been flipping with equipment unchanged in decades."
