Red wine - good for the breasts

Red wine is the latest craze in the beauty salons of Buenos Aires where it's said to tighten the stomach and firm the breasts.

Creams made with red wine or even a glass of pure wine are applied directly to the person's skin.

Wine therapy expert Diego Barberan told Las Ultimas Noticias: "After cleansing, the skin receives a special wine mask that is rich in vitamin E.

"It brings firmness and nutrition to the skin, making it healthy and elastic."

Beauty clinics all over Buenos Aires are reporting a huge increase in women asking for wine therapy.

Wine therapy fanatic Marcy Andres said: "It is fantastic. It does what it promises. I can say with no fear that I am addicted!"

Beer Spotlight

DAB Low Carb

Developed in 1978, it may be that the first low carb beer was DAB's Diat Pils from Germany for diabetics, not dieters. DAB is the first low carbohydrate light beer imported to the U.S. by any major major German brewer.

It contains a modest two grams of carbohydrates per 12- ounce bottle. This compares favorably to leading brands of low carb beers that range from 2.25 to 3.5 grams per 12 oz.

"DAB LOW CARB fits right in with current health trends and meets the competition ZZZhead-on with a quality low carb German import. What's more, it has only 92 calories per 12 oz. bottle. It's made for consumers seeking a low carb light beer that has the tast of a real lager."

DAB LOW CARB is a delicate, bottom-fermented export style beer with a clear golden appearance, mild, clean taste. and full-bodied mouthfeel.

Industry News

Loch Ness water for sale at £6 a pint

An Englishman who began selling water from Loch Ness as a joke says the enterprise has become a huge success.

Sales manager Brian Ball scoops water out of the loch and sells it at £6 a pint on the internet auction site eBay. The 37-year-old moved from London to Aberdeenshire last year, says the Daily Telegraph.

He got the idea after American friends asked him to bring them water from the home of the Loch Ness monster as a souvenir.

"It started as a joke, but it has really taken off," he said.

He said he asked the Loch Ness Visitor Centre and public health officials about the legality of selling the water and was told that as long as it was clearly labelled as unfit to drink, he could carry on.

Each bottle has a label with an image of the monster, and a guarantee of its origin.

Mr Ball, from Turriff, has taken around 250 orders from Australia, America, New Zealand, Kenya and Canada.

Guinness Trivia

taken from http://www.guinness.com/guinness/en_US/knowning/pearls/facts

We don't believe anything should be wasted, so the used grains from the brewing process go to become animal feed, the hops to become fertilizer and surplus yeast to make yeast extract or health products

- At 198 calories a pint GUINNESS® has fewer calories than a pint of skimmed milk or orange juice.
- GUINNESS® is Black and White because originally it was invented with Advertising in mind. This was because Black and White was the only printing mode available at the time!
- James Joyce called the Guinness family 'Lords of the Vat'
- Around ten million glasses of GUINNESS® are drunk around the world every day
- On average one Irish pub a day opens around the world
